Pope Francis calls US mass deportations a 'major crisis'

Pope Francis argued Tuesday mass deportations from the U.S. by the Trump administration are a "major crisis." He wrote in a letter to U.S. bishops that a "rightly formed conscience" has to express disagreement with connecting the status of those living in the country illegally to criminality. "I have followed closely the major crisis that is taking place in the United States with the initiation of a program of mass deportations," Pope Francis sa...

✂️ Pope Francis condemns the deportations of Trump and the White House responds that the Vatican also has a wall

The battle between Pope Francis and Donald Trump has already begun, as predicted by the precedent of the previous presidency of the tycoon, full of crosses of hostile statements (the Pontiff came to say in 2016 that the president was not a Christian). This time it starts with a direct clash on immigration. Jorge Mario Bergoglio published on Tuesday an unusual letter addressed to the American bishops “at these delicate moments”, which dedicates e...

Pope Francis has strongly condemned US President Donald Trump's plans to deport undocumented immigrants in a letter to US bishops. He said the policy undermines the dignity of immigrants and urged all Catholics to reflect on its legitimacy. Washington has reacted critically. They want "the Pope to focus on the Catholic Church and leave the US to deal with its borders".
